

LOWTHER CASTLE & GARDENS TRUST

Andrew Smith

is an economics graduate of Clare College, Cambridge. He is a chartered accountant and until 2009, was a London based partner at Price Waterhouse Cooper. During his 34 years at PwC, Andrew Smith had a wide range of leadership roles as an auditor, consultant and HR practitioner. In particular, he led PwC UK's banking and capital markets assurance practice, led its sustainability and climate change consulting practice and was HR partner for its 900 partners with a focus on partner development.

Since retiring from PwC, he has been a trustee of a number of charities based in Cumbria and London. He has been a trustee of Lowther Castle & Gardens Trust since 2012 with particular responsibility for its finances and relationships with key funders. He has also been a trustee of The Duke of Edinburgh's International Award since 2009; a trustee of Tullie House Museum and Art Gallery in Carlisle since 2010; a trustee of The Climate Group from 2009 to 2015; a trustee of London Transport Museum since 2017; and has chaired all their respective audit committees. He has been an alumnus member of Clare College audit committee since 2006.

Andrew Smith lives in Penrith, Cumbria with his wife Diana and has four married children and a growing number of grandchildren.